Scientific focus areas

Translational research with interest in basic, epidemiological and clinical research in sexual function and dysfunction since 1987. The overall focus of the research is to obtain a better understanding of mechanisms behind sexual function and dysfunction as well as the interaction between somatic and psychiatric disease and sexual function. This has included basic research on smooth muscle function in the male and female sexual responses, as well as clinical research on bio-psycho-social factors of importance for sexual health with focus on pharmacology, the impact of hormonal changes and chronic disease like diabetes, prostate cancer, arthritis, bipolar disease and psychosis on sexual function. Recently she has entered the research area of overlapping endocrinological and psychological neurobiological mechanisms between depression and sexual problems. AG has participated in several clinical trials on the pharmacological treatment of erectile dysfunction, female sexual desire, and arousal disorder and is currently responsible for a RCT investigating mindfulness in the treatment of sexual dysfunctions in men and women.
